To Whom It May Concern,

Tohoku University Graduate School of Dentistry is recruiting one Assistant Professor to work for Liaison Center of Innovative Dentistry.

Successful candidates will be responsible for duties below:

(1) Reinforcement of educational foundation:

On the basis of “Development of Multimodal Global Readers”, he/she will develop and manage advanced dental education programs such as International Cooperative Program. The Joint Education Program with our partner universities is also included.

(2) Management of International cooperation programs:

- Expanding and deepening international networks of research and education
- Formation of international hub for dental education and research

These duties require English communication skills and occasionally in other languages spoken in Asia and Oceania. We especially welcome young candidates this time, since Tohoku University promotes gender equality and encourages candidates with diverse backgrounds such as young researchers; female; and foreign nationals to apply for positions. Their commitment should contribute toward further reinforcement of educational foundation and international cooperation for the graduate school.

We welcome applications from you.

Sincerely,

Nobuhiro TAKAHASHI
